

GLOBE ALLIANCE

GLOBAL LEADERSHIP IN OUR BUILT ENVIRONMENT

Who We Are

The GLOBE Alliance (Global Leadership in Our Built Environment) is a broad-based international action network of environmental, business, industry, financial, faith-based, academic and community organizations around the world who share a commitment to advocating for sustainable building practices as a key strategy for combating climate change.

Why It Matters

The building sector has the greatest and most cost-effective greenhouse gas reduction potential out of all other sectors in the world. The tremendous population growth and development that many emerging economies are either already experiencing or projected to experience in the coming years underscores the need for strategies to decouple that growth from environmental and climate degradation, and improve the quality of life for citizens along the way. GLOBE works to capture the potential of buildings and ensure a sustainable, global clean energy future by:

- Influencing national and international policies to increase green building and energy efficiency measures;
- Promoting the development of the technical, regulatory, and financial tools to overcome barriers to green and efficient buildings in the marketplace; and
- Equipping international policymakers and opinion leaders with the tools, strategies and resources they need to take leadership positions.

What We Do

The GLOBE Alliance works around the world to educate, raise awareness and generate support from global policymakers, financial institutions, and U.N. bodies for cost-effective investment in sustainable building practices for emissions abatement and climate adaptation. With a unified voice and a coordinated global advocacy strategy, the GLOBE Alliance is committed to fostering leadership to bring to scale the low cost, often profitable, benefits of reducing greenhouse gas emissions through sustainable design, construction and operation of our built environment.
